EJP - European Journal of Personality

(Edited by Mitja Back)

EJP is committed to in-depth contributions to the study of personality and publishes papers that advance personality science in its broadest sense.

EJP considers

- all relevant research fields: e.g., personality structure, processes, expressions in social context, causes, development, and consequences
- all aspects of personality: e.g., motives and goals, temperament, character, self-concept, identity, life narratives, reputations, intelligence, emotional competencies, interpersonal styles, values, attitudes, stereotypes and prejudice, vocational and leisure interests
- various paper formats: Original empirical papers, preregistered replications, registered reports, systematic reviews and meta-analyses, innovative theoretical papers

EJP offers

- ✓ high impact: 2016 2-year ISI Impact Factor 3.71 (2nd highest empirical personality journal)
- ✓ constructive and fast feedback: Average decision time < 20 days (> 50 % desk rejections)
- ✓ no word limit
- ✓ streamlined review option
- ✓ Open Science Guidelines
- ✓ Registered Reports
- ✓ yearly paper award to the best publication that is based on a PhD or Master/Diploma thesis
